COVID Vaccines Linked to 2,500% Increased Risk of Early Onset Dementia

The Wuhan coronavirus (COVID-19) “vaccines,” according to researcher Steve Kirsch (<https://kirschsubstack.com/p/breaking-early-onset-dementia-is>), are associated with a 2,500% greater risk of developing early-onset dementia.

A charge nurse with 32 years of nursing experience was the subject of a conversation with Kirsch at a rehabilitation and long-term senior care facility. She admitted to him that, in terms of the quantity of brand-new dementia cases that are surfacing all around her, she has never seen anything like what she is currently witnessing.

Before COVID, the charge nurse would hardly ever witness someone demonstrate rapid onset hallucinations or other dementia-like characteristics. There would be a maximum of two a year, but most likely none up until COVID.

The charge nurse has observed early onset dementia signs over 50 times in the past year alone, which suggests a 25-fold rise in the dementia rate as a result of Operation Warp^Speed.

Additionally, the fatality rate in facilities for the elderly is extremely high. At the hospital where the charge nurse works, there may be seven deaths in a typical July. However, there were 150 deaths this year, which resulted in a particularly busy season at the neighborhood funeral home.

“It’s very noticeable by people who work at nursing homes, but most are not able to talk about it without losing their jobs,” Kirsch writes. “I finally found someone who will talk on video. Stay tuned.”

In the meantime, remember that people as young as 18 are now showing signs of dementia. Prior to Operation Warp Speed, dementia cases were nonexistent, but now that hundreds of millions of Americans have received COVID injections, they are on the rise more than ever before.

“No other vaccine in the 33-year history of VAERS is doing anything close to this kind of damage,” Kirsch writes.

You might remember that Kirsch recently carried out his own investigation on the death rates at senior living communities and geriatric practices. After realizing that the overall death rate has been rising every year since the release of COVID-19 “vaccines,” he deliberately constructed the survey to look for COVID jab-related deaths.

Currently, it appears that 2023 will have the greatest death rate on record, surpassing that of 2022 and 2021, the latter of which was the year that the majority of Americans received COVID injections.

“... the responses were that the deaths more than doubled each year in 2021, 2022, 2023 vs. the pre-COVID baseline with 2023 looking like the highest death rate on record,” Kirsch notes. “I didn’t find this surprising.”

In his poll, Kirsch asked for additional information from respondents in the comments section if they choose to do so. One in five responders said they had noticed an abrupt rise in dementia cases at their facility after Operation Warp Speed had released the shots.

“In particular, the new cases were high but also the onset age was much lower than normal,” Kirsch explains.

“Because these reports were completely unprompted (there was no mention of dementia anywhere in the survey), I suspect this is happening in every nursing facility and people are just assuming ‘that’s odd’ and thinking it is just a coincidence and not giving it a second thought ... Nope. No coincidence.”
